"Kailasa" — a name borrowed from the sacred peak itself. This is a trek for those who want the Himalayas without the crowds: alpine meadows, snow ridgelines, and a 360° wall of the Garhwal giants.

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

ABOUT THE PLACE

Kuari Pass, also known as the Curzon Trail, is one of the most beautiful and popular treks in the Garhwal Himalayas of Uttarakhand. Located at an altitude of 12,516 feet (3,820 metres), it offers breathtaking views of some of India's most iconic peaks — Nanda Devi, Dronagiri, Kamet, and Trishul.

The trail passes through dense forests of oak and rhododendron, charming Himalayan villages, and vast alpine meadows like Gurson Bugyal — a perfect blend of natural beauty and cultural experience.

Rated easy to moderate, it suits both first-time trekkers and seasoned mountain-goers. Accessible from Rishikesh via Joshimath, and best enjoyed September to April — when winter turns the entire landscape into a sparkling white paradise.
